GW'S STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE RELOCATES TO NEW FACILITY IN SPRING SEMESTER

Located One Block from Medical Faculty Associates Building and GW Hospital, New Center Provides Additional Space and Offers a More Service-Friendly Environment

WASHINGTON – The George Washington University's Student Health Service will open its new facility at 2141 K St. N.W., Suite 501, at the start of the spring semester, Jan. 18. The new location offers a spacious waiting room, more examination rooms, short-term observation rooms, space for administrative functions, and a large conference room for educational programs. It is located in close proximity to specialty care offices and pharmacy and ancillary services.

"The new facility offers GW students a more service-friendly environment and provides the clinicians and staff the additional space needed to more efficiently manage patient requirements," said Linda Donnels, GW associate vice president and dean of students.

The expanded facility is just one block from its current location in the GW Medical Faculty Associates building and one block from the GW Hospital. The Student Health Service is available to currently registered, degree-seeking GW undergraduate and graduate students. The GW Student Health Service supports both the Foggy Bottom and Mount Vernon campuses and handles nearly 18,000 student visits annually.
